

Cetațuia

A circular walk with marvellous views that passes the site of a Dacian citadel at the highest point

Approx 5 kms – 3.5 miles. Steepish climb between C & D; otherwise level or gentle descent

Domeniul Styrcea

This walk begins from the Manor House. Walk down past the Bell Tower and the war memorial to the bridge and at point A take the track down to the communal pasture and along a raised causeway until you get to the stream. Follow the stream to the right where shortly there is a rickety bridge B. Cross the bridge and turn left and follow a track that after a brief jink broadly follows the south bank of the stream until you get to a wood. Just before the wood the track heads away from the stream to enter the wood. Continue along the track. As the track comes out of the wood, follow the pasture along the southern edge of the wood until, close to the corner, you find a path that re-enters the wood C and winds steadily uphill in a southerly direction until you gain the crest of the hill (the route of the path on the plan is indicative; it is clear on the ground). At this point, turn Right and follow the edge of the wood uphill until you reach the crest. Follow the path that keeps close to the edge of the escarpment above a wild area of landslip that is now grazed by cattle and sheep. There is a good picnic spot at point D. The path gently descends in a wide arc until it follows the edge of the forest at point E. Keep on this track – descending more steeply now until you re-join the path you took earlier. Here you should turn Left which will bring you shortly to the rickety bridge and then retrace your steps back.
